Accompanying the Seekers The New Mission of the Church

Tomáš Halík is a Czech priest and philosopher who risked imprisonment for illegally advancing religious and cultural freedoms after the Soviet invasion of his country. He has since become a leading international advocate for dialogue among different faiths and non-believers. In 2014 he was awarded the prestigious Templeton Prize.

God is present in both the seekers and the seeking.

In addition to its two traditional tasks of providing pastoral care to Catholics and missionary outreach to those who have not heard of Christ, the Church needs to add a third task – “accompanying seekers”. “We cannot be just arrogant owners of the truth ... we must be seekers for the seekers, with the seekers.”
